

Georgia O'Keeffe is known for her flower paintings, but also for her paintings of the desert. She started her career in the Midwest and Eastern United States, but once she saw the New Mexico desert she moved there and painted it for the rest of her life. Georgia called the remote stretches of desert "The Faraway" and worked to share her experience of it with the world through her paintings.

Georgia loved the desert,
the colors everywhere.

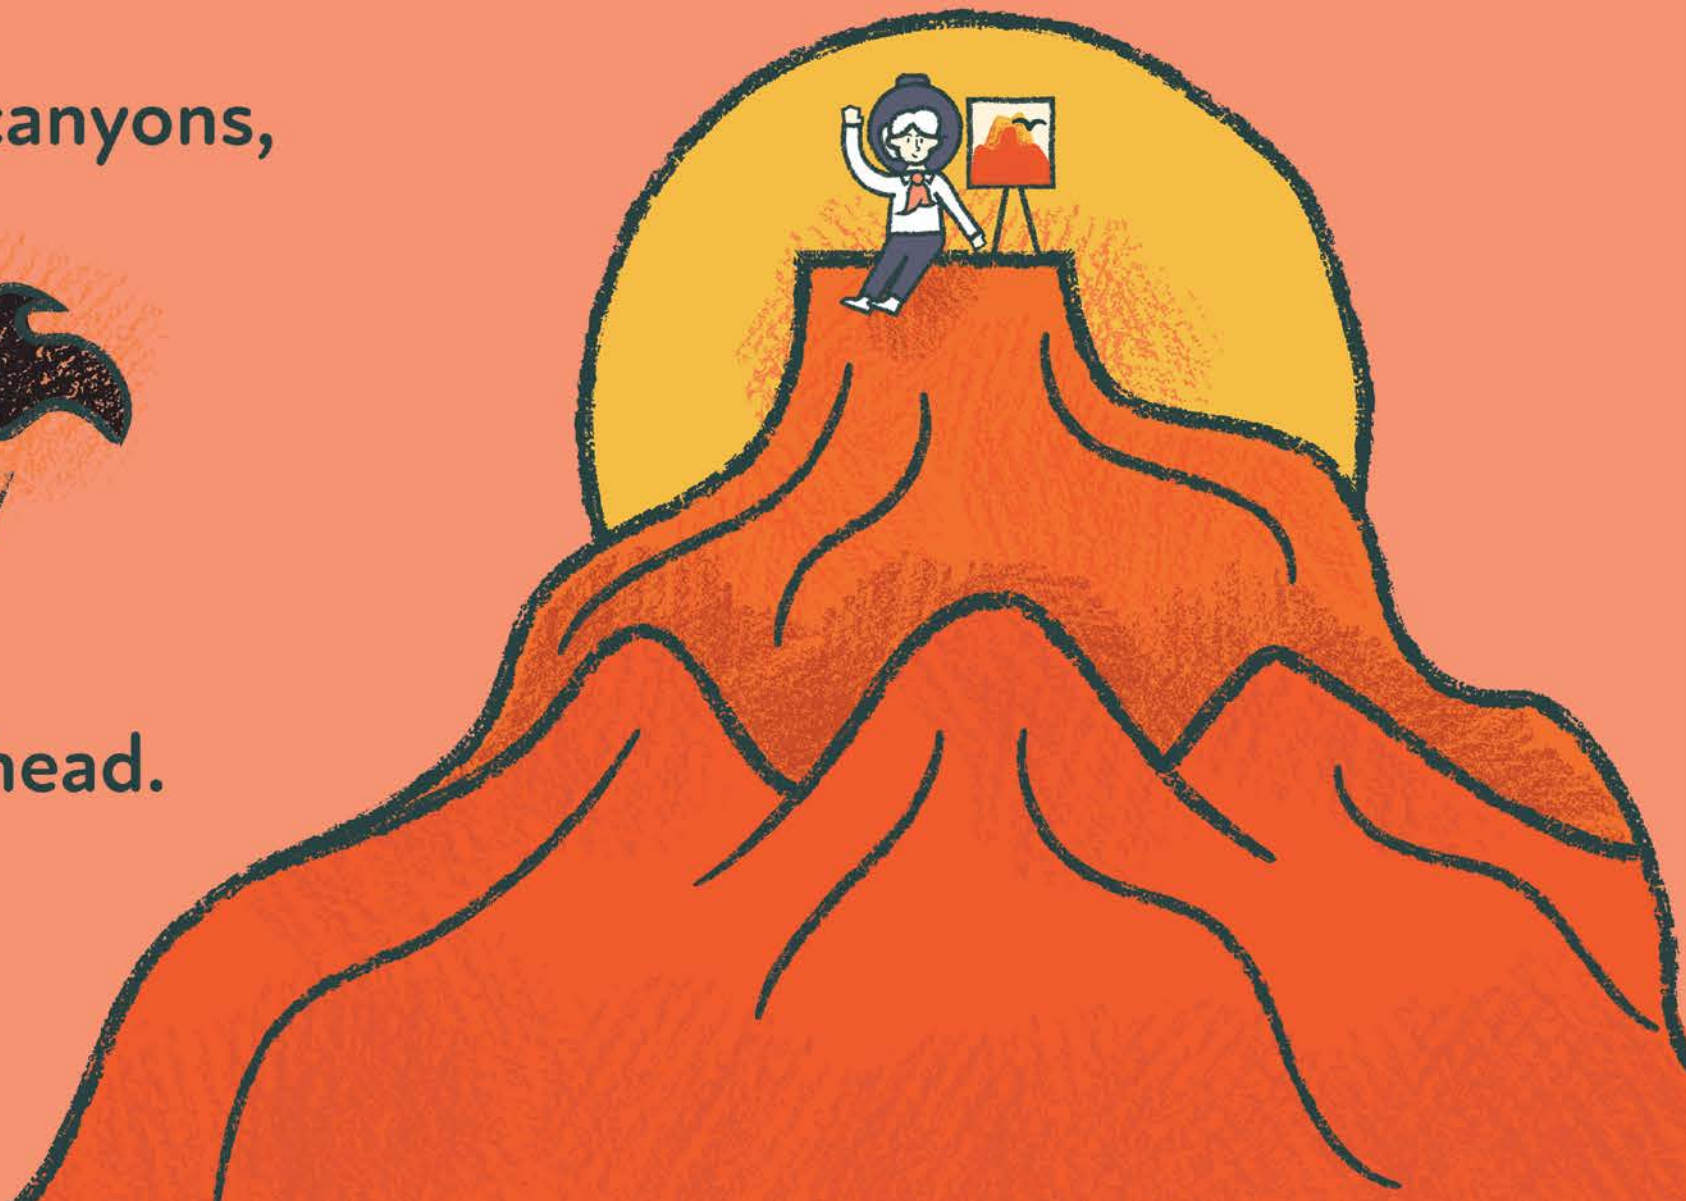

Georgia was an artist.
She lived and painted there.

She painted cliffs and canyons,

and a black bird overhead.

She painted cottonwood trees.

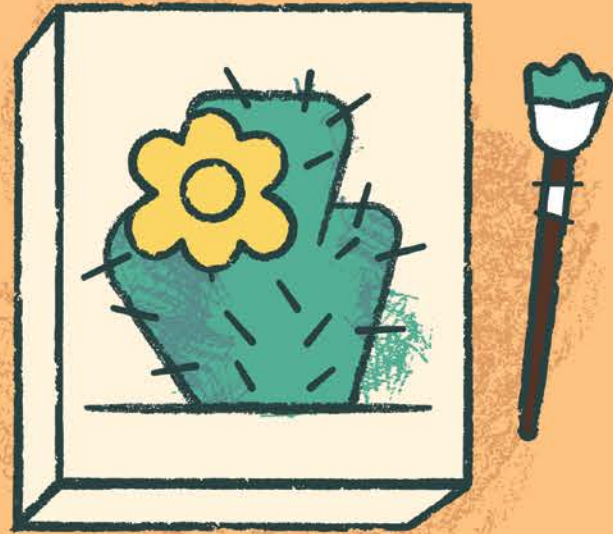

She painted desert flowers ...

Draw it,

paint it,

sing it, wherever it may be.
