

When Jane was a child she loved to learn about animals. As a young woman, Jane traveled to Africa, where she went to work for famed paleoanthropologist Dr. Louis Leakey. He asked her to study chimpanzees in Gombe in Tanzania, and she stayed there for four decades, learning about how chimpanzees lived. Today Jane works to inspire people to conserve the environment and protect animals. She has written books and received many honors and awards. In addition to the Jane Goodall Institute for Wildlife Research, Education, and Conservation, Jane has started a conservation club for young people called Roots and Shoots.

LITTLE NATURALISTS

JANE GOODALL

IS A FRIEND TO ALL

BY KATE COOMBS
ART BY SETH LUCAS

Jane Goodall went to Africa-

she looked at things and climbed up trees.

But most of all Jane Goodall

became a friend to chimpanzees.

Jane Goodall learned a lot of things that people never knew.

But most of all Jane Goodall

is a friend to chimpanzees.
